WILLS

Why make a Will?

A carefully prepared Will can relieve financial strain on your family after your death – and prevent arguments. If you die without a Will then the Administration Act applies which divides your estate in defined proportions between your surviving spouse (if you are legally married) and children. This may not be what you want and may even cause hardship. It will almost certainly take longer and be more expensive when you die.

The Will should include not just your money but all your property and possessions including life insurance policies.

We have the qualifications and experience to give you proper advice on your Will.

Telephone for an appointment or send us an e-mail or fax.

Important Note: Marriage revokes a Will. You need to make a new Will after marriage.
